Is double cohort double trouble?

SHERYL LOUCKS

Staff Reporter

Don't panic.

These two words, used like a mantra by the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School administration, are its answer to two other powerful words that have stalked a group of students throughout high school - double cohort.

There are approximately 200 students at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School who will comprise the double cohort this fall. That's when 40 OAC, or fifth-year, students and 162 Grade 12 students begin their last year of high school together.

Universities across the province have in contrast made it their mission to panic.

Cash-starved post-secondary institutions have been begging the government for the last two decades for more money to improve aging buildings, technology and infrastructure. The double cohort has given them the political clout to demand funding and the Ontario Conservatives have responded with $218-million last year and they say $1-billion in total.

Everyone is asking, is it enough?

The Council of Ontario Universities website outlines how they estimate more than 100,000 students will apply for 60,000 university seats next year. The council explains in a lobbying letter to the provincial government that this strain on the system from at least 33,500 extra students trying to get in the doors at once is just the tip of a 90,000 additional (above average entrance num-

Staffing shortfall

HHHS solves its x-ray technician problem; now it has to work on its on-call nursing shortage

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

The x-ray technician crisis has been averted.

But Haliburton Highlands Health Services still has another staffing issue to address: the reluctance of nurses to be available on an on-call basis.

A part-time x-ray technician who had planned to leave the area has decided to stay now that she's been offered a full-time job.

"We have full coverage at both sites," reported Lynne Johnston, director of acute and ambulatory care, at Thursday's Haliburton Highlands Health Services board meeting. "It's a bit tight when someone's ill but we're all right for now."

The new full-time position was created to try to help solve the shortage of technicians, which made it increasingly difficult to staff both Minden and Haliburton emergency sites.

Although the switch will cost the HHHS an additional $40,000 to $50,000 a year, it hopes to reduce the cost by reducing over-time costs. As well, the technician will work mornings in Minden and be available afternoons in Haliburton, the busier of the two sites.

Meanwhile, HHHS received many inquiries after it advertised for a full-time technician. While none of the applicants were interested in moving to the area for part-time work,

Passenger seriously injured in Kinmount accident

MILESTONES!

To my girls...

all my love, Peaches

On May 18 at approximately 5:15 p.m., a vehicle driven by Wilson Waung, 22, of North York was southbound on Kawartha Lakes Road 121 south of Kinmount. He turned left onto Kawartha Lakes Road 49 and struck a northbound vehicle driven by Laura Burkholder, 41, of Stouffville.

The two drivers suffered minor injuries but a passenger in Waung's vehicle, Tien Nygen, 29, of Toronto had to be taken from the scene by air ambulance to Toronto's Sunnybrook Health Sciences Centre for his injuries.

The investigation is continuing and charges are pending.

The Echo was unable to get details of Waung's condition. This photo of the accident was taken by Haliburton resident Peter Gowdy who was passing by.

Community Helpers

Throughout the month of May, WeeCare invited various community helpers to visit the Haliburton daycare. Clockwise from top left, Dysart et al Fire Chief, Miles Maughan gives a young participant a tour of a shiny red fire truck; Austin McKay, 3, sits in the back of an OPP cruiser and experiences what it's like to see through the cage as OPP Sgt. Dave Fletcher looks on; paramedic Don Stephenson practises on his son William; and the kids descend on a puppy from the Great Haliburton Feed Company.

911 project needs volunteers

Descriptive information will be added to emergency call centre's database

SHERYL LOUCKS
Staff Reporter

Volunteers are needed for the latest stage in the 911 project for Haliburton County.

During a recent public meeting at the county offices in Minden, Steve Foster, 911 coordinator, explained to people the county needs road representatives to take it upon themselves to collect information about the residents on their road.

In a February meeting, it came to county councillors' attention that slow progress was being made for data collection and they would not at the present rate meet the July 2004 start date for 911.

Foster says road representatives on average will have no more than 17 houses per road or as few as three. A road has to have a minimum of three habitable dwellings on it to count as a road.

The information needed includes driveway characteristics, local names for the access road, property owner's name and telephone number and distinguishing features of the buildings or properties.

The volunteers are also being asked to record any non-building features on the road where the public might gather, such as a park or a public beach. These areas will also be assigned numbers.

Volunteers and property owners are also asked to provide a preferred drive path, or best way for a vehicle to get to the property quickly and safely.

There are 1,800 roads in the county and approximately 30,000 properties - it's a daunting task to collect information about all of them, says Foster.

So far the county only has 12 per cent of the information-gathering process completed. Foster says Hydro One and Statistics Canada Census have refused to help with information because of rights legislated in the access to information act.

The information provided will be entered into a database and tied to the phone number for that dwelling (when there is a phone there) so that when a call is made from that house to 911, all that information will appear instantly before the operator. How the system works for islands, is the boat landing from access point will be used for the address markers for emergency services. Foster compared a cluster of cottages on an island to a horizontal apartment building where each apartment has a separate address, as each cottage will.

Crews are currently out using equipment to map where properties are on what roads and assigning new 911 civic addresses. If a group of cottagers have a locked gate on their private road, they must arrange with Foster to allow the crews on to the road or else they will not be assigned an address.

On roads that are not in drivable shape, the 911 addressing crews will go as far as they can and then assign numbers at that spot for buildings beyond that point.

Addresses need to be assigned this year for the project to meet its deadline.

Anyone wishing more information or wanting to volunteer to represent their road should call the 911 county office at 705 286-2306.

Double cohort phenomenon 'no big deal' for students

bers) student iceberg expected to come crashing through the system before this decade ends.

University applications have been escalating for several years with almost 16,000 more students than expected entering the provincial system this fall alone.

Staggering numbers, but the council is making the most of it to boost funding claims. High school and Trillium School Board administrators claim there is no reason for students or parents to worry.

First of all, not every student wants to go to university. Out of the 200 students caught in the double cohort at HHSS, only 40 will be in OAC and 75 taking the Grade 12 university stream courses.

Erica Fearrey, who will be in Grade 12 next year, says she is not worried about being part of the double cohort and neither are her friends.

"It's not something we talk about," she says. "I don't think it's a big deal. No extra pressure is being put on us by the teachers or staff."

With the expectation of needing high grades to compete for a post-secondary seat, completing 40 hours of mandatory voluntary service and having four rather than five years to do it may seem like pressure, but Fearrey shrugs it off.

An athlete, she has participated in several sports, worked part-time, volunteered and kept good grades in the applied stream.

It has meant doing her homework on the bus now and then but certainly hasn't altered her dreams for her future.

The 16-year-old has always wanted to be a veterinary technician and is currently completing a co-operative education placement at the local veterinary hospital. To achieve her goals she needs to go to college where there is more choice and less competition.

Chris Duchene, head of student services, says they advised students last year to schedule low enrollment courses this year to be sure they get them instead of chancing it next fall. Most students followed their advice.

Duchene explained people who are screaming at the media about double cohort issues tend to be parents or students from large cities who feel the students should have the right to attend their local university instead of slugging it out with the rest of the population.

Duchene added it will be even more difficult for some students to get into popular low enrollment programs but if students look to smaller Ontario universities or out of province universities, they will get into the program of their choice.

Ann Varty, a parent of a student in the double cohort and of a first-year university student, is also not worried and says the four-year program does not put an extra strain on kids.

"What has been taken out (of the new four-year curriculum) is time to play euchre or go uptown for a coffee. OAC students often only take four credits; it gives them more flexibility time to work more hours at part-time jobs," says Varty, who is also a curriculum consultant for the Trillium Lakelands Board of Education.

Varty says some universities are reporting they are looking at formulas to level the playing field between OAC and the new Grade 12 graduates because many in education say the new curriculum is harder. The majority of universities, however, will judge marks equally.

"It's like Y2K. Everyone is waiting, not knowing what'll happen. The whole fact it's different and the system might not be as fair (for the double cohort)," says Varty.

The media has reported concerns about financial assistance and student awards. Gary Brohman, HHSS principal, says he has been assured by MPP Chris Hodgson there is more money than ever in the pot.

On a local level, when it comes to divvying up the awards for graduating students this fall, "kids will just have to deal with the reality that there is only one award and they will either have to compete for it or split it," says Brohman.

The impact on students leaving high school is only one aspect of this shift to a four year program. Given that the education formula is on a per pupil basis, the funding impact on schools is less clear.

Brohman echoed Varty by saying it is a waiting game. Students will still have the choice to stay after four years, and perhaps some will pick up more courses or up-grade. After the double cohort graduates, students who have failed or want an OAC may pick one up through a correspondence course or a modified Grade 12 course.

"It's a paradigm shift in Ontario that we're unsure of. There may be fewer dollars, less students and less teachers. Maybe not," says Brohman.

A recent provincial announcement says the Conservatives will be making $350-million available to address lower enrollment issues (that have plagued the system before the double cohort) and funding shortfalls in the system.

Erica Fearrey, a 16-year-old Grade 11 student, wants to become a veterinary technician and does not think being a member of the double cohort will slow her down.

Buckhorn Road work may be delayed

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Highlands East politicians are criticizing a plan to delay a reconstruction project on the Buckhorn Road between Gooderham and Haliburton.

Originally, the county roads department had hoped to spend $400,000 to upgrade about five kilometres of the road this year. When county council cut that to $200,000 during budget talks, it made the roads department question whether it should start the project this year and abandon it over the winter until next year's budget will give it the funds to finish it.

At Wednesday's county council meeting, engineering services manager Roy Haig says that it would cost roughly $200,000 just to do the work to prepare the project. This includes engineering work, crushing gravel and installing culverts. If this work was to be done this year, the affected areas could not be resurfaced until next year.

Another alternative is to spend the $200,000 on a smaller portion of the road.

"We might get two kilometres done but two kilometres won't do a lot for us," said Haig.

"It would help," Highlands East Reeve Keith Tallman responded.

Instead, the county roads department is suggesting that it spend $100,000 this year on preparation work and divert the other $100,000 to another project. Then, next year, the entire job would be completed.

Highlands East Deputy-reeve Chuck Viner was opposed to any delay.

"If we don't do something about the road this year, we won't have to worry about it because we won't have any road left," he said sarcastically.

He said he was led to believe the county roads department could work within the $200,000 budget.

There's a similar problem arising with the Kushog Lake Road project. There's $400,000 in the budget and engineering estimates are coming in around $800,000.

Algonquin Highlands Deputy-reeve Don Shortreed said that most of the county's road money was going into County Road 121, the former highway between Minden and Haliburton. He questioned whether the county fought the transfer of the highway strongly enough.

Operations manager Doug Ray said the county didn't have much choice at the time. The county was given money at the time of the transfers, but it has since been used up. The second phase of current reconstruction project will cost $1-million, with all the money coming from property taxpayers.

"If we think we're in trouble this year, wait until next," said Warden Eleanor Harrison.

The projects will be discussed at the next roads department meeting.

County councillors take pay cut to save $3,200

County councillors, who are already amongst the lowest-paid politicians in the province, are about to take home even less money for their efforts.

On Wednesday, they modified their pay structure to make sure their pay was decreased.

The issue arose when preliminary payment figures indicated the county would spend $3,200 more than the $18,000 the county had budgeted for the politicians' salaries. Rather than budget more money, councillors decided to trim their pay even more.

This, despite that fact that a recent survey indicated that Haliburton County ranks third from the bottom in how much remuneration it gives its politicians.

The new by-law says that the warden will be paid $15,000 a year and each councillor $4,800. Councillors then get paid for the number of meetings they attend and mileage.

Previously, they'd get $100 for a day meeting and $50 for a night meeting, regardless of the meeting's length. This was to recognize that, for those councillors who work, they'd have to take time off work to attend a day meeting.

But sometimes a day meeting can last only an hour and a night meeting three or four.

The new pay schedule says that councillors will be paid $50 for every meeting less than three hours and $100 for every meeting that goes beyond three hours.

As well, they will no longer be able to charge $50 a day for attending conferences on the county's behalf. (They had the opportunity to do this in the past but many of them did not submit invoices for the money.)

Dysart et al Deputy-reeve Bill Davis said he was against such a payment because councillors volunteer to go to conferences. The county is already paying for accommodation, food and mileage ($0.35 a kilometre).

Hospital nurses don't want to disrupt lives for $2.50 an hour which was the HHHS's preference, a young woman who will be graduating in September is interested in moving to the area and would accept part-time work.

Meanwhile, doctors who staff the Minden emergency site are increasingly frustrated about the inability to call in a nurse when the nurse on duty has to accompany a patient in an ambulance to another site.

"Dr. Doug Fiddler thinks it's unacceptable they can't get a nurse in short order," Dr. Robert Heyes, medical chief of staff, reported.

Doctors at the Haliburton site would also like to see an on-call list established; they would be satisfied with being able to call in an RPN to fill in.

Until a couple of years ago, nurses were willing to be on an on-call list. This willingness no longer exists, despite attempts from administration to try to get them to change their minds.

"They want scheduled shifts," Johnston said. "They don't like the disruption in their lives by being on-call. I find it difficult to understand [this stance] because I've worked on both sides and I know what it's like to need help and there's no one willing to come in. It's stressful."

A nurse earns $2.50 an hour to be on call and must make sure she's available to come in to work at a moment's notice.

Other options include hiring an agency to provide a nurse to accompany a patient in an ambulance at a cost of $700 per trip, hiring an extra nurse at each site at a cost of $300,000 a year and hiring an extra nurse in the summer at a cost of $50,000 a year.

The new CEO, Keith Sansford, will be meeting with nurses to see if some solution can be found.

"The answer is simple; the process leading up to it is much more difficult," Sansford said. "We're a small community, we need to work together."

Union settlement?

When HHHS took over responsibility for the Minden and Haliburton sites, it had to deal with two unions, the Canadian Union of Public Employees, CUPE, and the Service Employees International Union, SEIU. Staff eventually voted on being part of SEIU.

MARTHA PERKINSECHO

Melinda O'Mara, director of the HHHS's long-term care units, takes HHHS board members for a tour of Highland Wood as part of last week's meeting. The new 30-bed long-term care unit is celebrating its first anniversary.

However, at that time, HHHS did not have formal responsibility for Hyland Crest, which was not part of the vote. As a result, Hyland Crest staff still belong to CUPE while other staff members are on SEIU. It's the HHHS's hope that it will eventually have only one union to work with.

Until then, it can be difficult to efficiently schedule housekeeping staff. At present, Minden staff will not work at the Haliburton site.

At a recent meeting with CUPE, the union agreed that its staff can work at the Haliburton site, that the organization would be, in effect, borderless. A future meeting is planned with SEIU and Sansford is hoping it will agree to the same principle.

If this takes place, it will take off the pressure to have only one union representing both sites, but Sansford says it's still important to keep pushing for the change.

Hyland Crest review

On June 19, 20 and 21, a compliance advisor with the Ministry of Health will be touring Hyland Crest. Her report will include either findings, which have to be addressed immediately, or recommendations, which, if they're not followed, become findings.

"Our desire is that they have no findings," said Sansford, who has a legislated responsibility to post the report. He noted that long-term care units are far more regulated than acute care units.

A review of Highland Wood in Haliburton will likely take place in August.

Foundation

The HHHS Foundation's capital fundraising campaign is on target, manager Dale Walker reported. The goal is to raise the community's $5.5-million five years after its inception, or by the end of 2003.

Upcoming events include a Deck and Dock dinner in Toronto with MPP Chris Hodgson. "It's cottage country attire with a black tie ticket price," said Walker. There's also a women's golf tournament on June 23.

Death of aunt prompts local teacher to help raise money for breast cancer research

KENNETH JACKSON

Staff Reporter

One small stroke for peace of mind. One giant stroke for all women.

That is what Kimberly Desjardins is doing this July when she joins other women in a sea kayaking adventure for the Canadian Breast Cancer Foundation.

Desjardins has to raise $2,500 dollars to enter the kayaking trip, along with paying for her plane ride to British Columbia where her trip will take place.

There are eight other kayaking trips in total, including those around the Great Lakes.

"I have a lot of friends going on the Great Lakes trips, but I wanted to do something different and meet new people," she says.

Just last year the Haliburton teacher's aunt died of breast cancer and she says that helped her in her decision to do this.

"I found out about these trips that raise money for CBF and I remembered my aunt. Plus, where I use to work I had

For seven days this summer, Kimberly Desjardins, a teacher at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, will be kayaking 120 kilometres along British Columbia's Gulf Islands to raise money for breast cancer research. She needs to raise $2,500 in the community before she leaves.

co-workers who have gone on these trips in the past and they said it was a great time."

Her trip, in the southern Gulf Islands, is 120 km and will take seven days to complete.

She plans on reaching out to the community to reach the necessary $2,500.

"I'll be knocking on the doors," she says laughing. "I'm really behind in the fundraising. I have to do it any way possible."

She shouldn't have much trouble with the kayaking since she has been doing it for most of her life.

"I am an avid kayaker, but I've only done white-water kayaking. I don't see it being that difficult," she says of her 120 km trip.

The goal is to raise $500,000 for the Canadian Breast Cancer Foundation.

If you would like to help Kimberly Desjardins you can e-mail her at K.desjardins@tldsb.on.ca.

Keeping a record of our past

There is absolutely no doubt that the internet has become an invaluable resource in our everyday lives. With a click of a mouse, you can usually find all kinds of information, information that 10 years earlier would have required a trip to a library.

The relative ease with which we access the internet's seemingly endless databank has created certain expectations, however. Shouldn't all information be as easy to get to?

— martha perkins

Here at The Echo, we have been electronically archiving our stories for the past four or five years. Today, if someone asks us to e-mail them a story, or a series of stories, it's as simple as doing a title search and hitting "send." That tool is available only for stories, however, and only for stories that were written since we converted to our present computer system. Want a story from 1983? You'll have to come to the office and go through our boxes of old papers. There's no easier way to get a copy of the story.

In the past few months, we've been augmenting our computerized files by storing electronic versions of each page. This allows us to keep a record of not only the stories, but the ads as well. (It also allows us to provide copies of a page, sometimes in colour, if you want the page as a memento. There's a small charge, but the paper won't age the way newsprint will.)

There's no doubt that having an electronic record of The Echo is an invaluable – and necessary – service. As the mirror that's held up to reflect the lives of people in the Highlands, The Echo's own life needs to be preserved.

Yet at the same time, The Echo must be run as a business. It's our dream to go through the old discs of stories that we have and translate them into a language our new computers can read. But it would take someone a few weeks to go through them all. The task of indexing all old papers (we do have a list of headlines from papers from the 1980s to our present system) is too daunting to even contemplate. We simply couldn't afford to do it.

This brings to mind the important role played by our museums, both here and across the country. Barely a month goes by when we don't have to phone the Haliburton Highlands Museum to ask for information or advice. Because the museum's job is to be a public record of our community's past, it does have an extensive archive system. Without the staff doing that work, however, all that information would just be sitting there, almost useless because there'd be no way to make sense of it all.

People rarely see the need for such archives until they themselves have a question they need answered. Then, how great it is that someone took the time to care about our past. Will we one day be able to have a huge computerized archive of the day-to-day artefacts of our lives? A nice dream, but an expensive one. Until then, we'll all have to accept the internet's shortcomings and do some of our research the old-fashioned way.

Fly-fishing for chub

The other day I was up the creek without a paddle, a predicament not unusual for an angler who prefers wading to canoe tipping. I was stalking one of those secret brook trout spots that you sometimes hear about from ten or so people. In this case, it was so secret that even the fish didn't know it existed.

The weatherman called for a beautiful day, so, naturally, I left home fully prepared for an ice storm. This explains why I was overdressed in chest waders, a sweatshirt, fully packed fishing vest and hat. I also carried a rod, binoculars, lunch and camera as I always do. All this while, the sun beat down on me, further reddening the back of my neck.

Obviously, I worked up quite a sweat. Of course, if you've never worn rubber pants you can't fully appreciate what I'm trying to convey. Suffice it to say that my forehead glistened enough to make passing aircraft circle for a second look.

I waded upstream and around the bend to a deep pool that looked absolutely fishy. Sure enough, I cast a dry fly and hooked one. But it was not a trout, just a simple creek chub, the bane of trout fishermen everywhere. As we came face to face, I gave it the same sort of look that blind dates used to give me. In all fairness, it didn't seem all that impressed either.

I released it, cast again and struck another. Nervously, I had a quick look around and kept fishing. Between you and me it was a whole lot of fun. I caught and released several more. That's the thing about chub; they're not too bright. Then again, neither am I, which explains what happened next.

By this time, the sun was high and the water was relatively warm. I was deep in the woods about five hundred yards from the nearest road or even footpath. So I went to shore and removed my waders, vest and sweatshirt, and stepped back into the creek wearing only fishing hat and boxers.

Though cold, the water refreshed my tired feet and, as I waded knee deep, I was just happy to be alive. I should have known better. Nothing good ever comes of that.

I cast again, this time more carefully, fully aware that there'd be trouble if one fly met another.

As I duped another chub, I couldn't help but chuckle. The fishing was too easy. But, regrettably, I hooked it deeply. So, like a surgeon, I got the forceps out and did my best to remove the fly gently. And succeeded.

Blame it on the mid-day sun, but I also took this opportunity to whisper comforting words to the fish, as I looked it in the eye.

Which is right about when the hikers stepped around the corner and stopped dead in their tracks. The older ladies let out ear-popping shrieks and the men doubled over in an impolite fit of pointing and belly laughter. Me, I stood there surprised and red-faced with a tiny fish hanging between my thumb and forefinger.

To make matters worse, I happened to be wearing white boxer shorts decorated with little red hearts. But I won't elaborate since not much is written about the horrors of Father's Day abuse.

"Hey, you're Steve Galea aren't you?" One old fellow asked directly.

"Uh, yes sir" I gulped.

"That goofy outdoors writer?" The older lady asked, averting her eyes.

"The very one," he chuckled.

After the photos and picnic, they ambled off, still smirking.

Believe me, I've never been so embarrassed in all my life. I mean, imagine how you'd feel if you got caught flyfishing for chub.

Fence me in

THERE WAS A TIME, A VERY LONG TIME AGO, when humans did not have fences. When you are a nomad, a fence just gets in the way. But with the retreat of the ice age, folks began to settle down and grow crops, keep animals and generally have a need to keep the two separate. Fences seemed like a good idea. Almost anything could be a fence: rocks, tree branches and roots, bones. So fences and fence-building have a long and noble history.

These were Charlotte's thoughts as she steeled herself to pull the chord on her rented, gas-powered, clutch driven, power fencepost digger. A one-person machine that required only one Hercules or one Wonder Woman to operate, the digger was an intimidating contraption for which Charlotte was slowly building up courage. Her good friend Jeanette (for only a good friend would volunteer) was due any minute and together they were going to build a fence across the front of Charlotte's property. Jeanette had already built a fence at her own place, thereby having the dubious status of experienced fence builder.

Sitting on her deck's steps, Charlotte gazed in awe at the giant corkscrew-shaped portion of the rented apparatus. Hard to believe they were actually going to be operating it shortly. As she gazed, she thought of other fences she had watched take shape over the years. Perhaps observation is a form of learning, she mused, although each of those fences had been different from what she planned to construct.

There was the rail fence her father had built around the old farm house, to keep the cattle belonging to the farmer who rented the pasture, at a safe distance. He had toiled all weekend with a shovel, that plus his own arms being his fencepost digger at the time. Charlotte could not recall many details, as it was far back in her childhood, but she did remember her amazement at the depth of the holes he dug and how, once the rocks were dropped in around the posts, it was as though they were encased in concrete. Solid. She and her sisters spent the next several years climbing over the fence and there was never a wobble that Charlotte could remember. Now, looking at the job before her, she shuddered at the number of posts dug that weekend by her father working with only her nine-year old's supervision for assistance.

Her mother had a fence around her vegetable garden at the cottage. She had given up trying to get Charlotte's father to build her something, so had gone ahead and thrown together whatever she could lay her hands on. Now that was an interesting fence. It was constructed of chicken wire and leftover scraps of lumber- plywood, the occasional two by sixes- connected by a variety of uprights: broom handles and tree branches mainly. The circumference was topped with aluminum pie plates strung on twine, to make a discouraging rattle that would theoretically ward off marauding animals. Tucked away from the rest of cottage activities, its disconnected appearance went largely unnoticed, except when Charlotte's mother went in or out of her fence. Then the pie plates made a heck of a racket and anyone within ear shot would come running to see if an animal had got in among the peas.

Then there was the fence Charlotte's former husband had built shortly after they were married. Even at that early date, Charlotte had a sinking feeling about the marriage and, in hindsight, so probably did her new husband. They just didn't seem to have a lot to talk about and their interests veered in quite different directions. However, they did agree on one thing. They needed a fence around their modest yard to keep the new dog from wandering off. Her husband had seized on this project like a drowning man grabbing for a life raft. Not at all familiar with manual work of any kind, let alone something requiring tools, he sought out magazines and books on fence styles and construction, poring over drawings and setting up a grid of strung rope and stakes all over the lawn. Once construction began, he was outside hour after hour, as he dug, re-dug, moved, hammered and swore copiously. Charlotte listened politely as he explained why he was building the type of fence that he was. It was all very logical while being, at the same time, very emotional. When the fence was finally completed, perfect to the smallest detail of counter-sunk screws filled and sanded, he gave Charlotte the incredible privilege of painting it. The many surfaces of this complicated fence took many hours to paint. But when fully done, it was indeed a beautiful fence. They both stood and admired it. Unfortunately, the marriage was much less durable, and the fence, together with the small house, were sold less than a year later.

Charlotte shuddered at this last thought. She had no intentions of moving from this house. It was ideal for her, except for a few details, one of which being it needed a fence. But would she be jinxing it in some way by fencing it with such care? The image of that perfect fence in the imperfect marriage floated before her. Nonsense, she told herself with a shake. Besides, she could always add some small final touch that would prevent the fence from being absolutely correct. Then she looked at the post hole digger and realized she had nothing to fear in the perfection department. If she and Jeanette were even able to hang on to the thing, that was probably as good as it would ever get.

Pic of the Past

In the summer of 1933, a mother and daughter go for a walk along a newly constructed road in this week's Pic of the Past. The photo was taken by the late Norm Smith and his daughter, Lorraine C. Smith of Lake Kashagawigamog, believes it might be the South Kashagawigamog Lake Road looking down the hill from the west to the curve where Chateau Woodland was later located. Volunteer visitors always needed

To the Editor:

Everyone needs a visitor and the older a person becomes the greater their need. I want to encourage people to become visitors. In almost 60 years of visiting I have never had a bad experience. Visiting can be interesting, challenging, compassion evoking and knowledge sharing. Frequently what a person really needs is a good listener – not a solution, they come up with their own solution as they talk.

When I was working as an appliance repairman I went to the homes of probably six to eight people a day. Many of these people needed to talk to someone. Older people would be very upset when things weren't working for them. Although they needed their appliance fixed, what they really needed was reassurance.

Visitors can positively affect situations. For example: change feeling depressed to feeling joyful. I went to a home where the hostess and host were very upset because an elderly guest had died in her sleep that night. In conversation with the hostess and host, I asked if their guest was a Christian. They realized this should be a joyful occasion. Another example: I found a woman upset, and in encouraging her to talk, she explained that a doctor had told her she had a terminal illness and did not know how to tell her family. Facing the problem head on and talking about it gave her an idea how to tell them.

Many groups in the community need the help of volunteer visitors. Two suggestions are Haliburton County Home Support Services (705) 457-2941 and SIRCH Community Hospice (705) 457-1742. If you are not sure about how to be a visitor, SIRCH provides 45 hours of free training or other groups will give some instructions. Volunteer visiting is a satisfying and pleasant experience. Go and visit a friend. They will be very glad to see you, or pick up your phone and join a group of your choice right now.

Striking OPSEU workers appreciated support

To the Editor:

The Ontario Public Service Employee's strike is now a part of history. The gratitude, however, felt by the striking employees will last a lifetime.

The members from OPSEU locals 309, 317 and 356 in the Minden and Haliburton area wish to express our heart felt thanks to everyone, (including, but not limited to, organizations, businesses and individuals; the list is so long that we cannot possibly list them all here), who supported us during the recent labour dispute. Your contributions of coffee, food, firewood, support funds, encouraging words, cheers and horn honking were immensely appreciated. This support made the 54 days of strike much more tolerable and we

Snowmobile trails threatened by trespassing ATVs, association says

Many snowmobile trails in Ontario could be closed permanently if ATV riders do not respect private property by staying off them, says the Ontario Federation of Snowmobile Clubs (OFSC).

The OFSC is warning ATV riders to stay off of snowmobile trails on private land unless they have specific permission from the property owner to use the trail.

Snowmobile trails are closed until grooming starts again next winter, and permission for those trails on private land is granted for the exclusive use of snowmobiles with trail permits during the winter months only. Any other user group must first obtain their own permission for their own use from each landowner or they are trespassing and can be charged.

"The OFSC is very concerned that too many ATV riders are indiscriminately using trails without landowner permission," says OFSC President Dennis Burns. "Such use is not only illegal, it is disrespectful of property owner rights and threatens the longstanding good relationships our snowmobile clubs have established over 35 years of responsible use."

Liability insurance is also a big concern. When an OFSC snowmobile club obtains landowner consent for a snowmobile trail, the OFSC's $15-million third party liability insurance coverage automatically kicks in to protect the landowner, the club, club volunteers and the OFSC, should any incident occur on that trail resulting in a claim for damages or injuries. Many other user groups either do not have liability insurance or have inadequate coverage that does not provide sufficient protection.

"Illegal trail use by ATV riders not only threatens the continuing existence of snowmobile trails in many parts of Ontario; if those trails disappear through permanent closure by frustrated landowners, the winter economic, tourism, social and recreational benefits of snowmobile trails to rural Ontario communities will also significantly decrease," says Burns. "This illegal usage is a huge issue that must be addressed immediately by both the ATV community and proponents of ATV-based tourism."

Road kings: Hawks girls soccer team finishes season in strong fashion

The senior girls soccer team went undefeated May 22, by beating St. Thomas 1-0 and Bethany Hills 4-1.

Jenna Benoit scored the lone goal in the St. Thomas match which was assisted by Meredith Brown. Jessica Keetch recorded the shutout.

Benoit also notched two goals in the second game against Bethany Hills while Ashleigh Packer also kicked in two. Getting assists were Danielle LeBlanc with two and singles by Kerry Schakelaar and Packer.

The Lady Red Hawks finished the season with 4 wins and 6 losses.

Don't worry, Cty. Rd. 121 construction finishes mid-June

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Drivers will be pleased to know that work on County Road 121 between the Ingoldsby turn-off and the Allsaw bridge is ahead of schedule.

It's expected the traffic delays along the busy stretch of road linking Minden and Haliburton will be over by the middle of June. Previously, it was thought the construction would last until the end of June.

Pulverizing the existing asphalt will begin this week.

Roy Haig, the county roads department's manager of engineering services, was asked if there were any plans to decrease the steepness of the hill leading down to the Allsaw bridge.

He said the idea had been considered but rejected.

Down at the bridge, which crosses the narrows between Soyers Lake and Lake Kashagawigamog, the dip in the road is intentionally low, Haig said. "It's to provide an overflow [area] if we get flooding so it doesn't wash out the bridge."

Minden Hills Deputy-reeve Jim McMahon said he had heard rumours that the county spent $70,000 to move the hydro poles in expectation of the hill's grade being improved, only to have the roads department change its mind.

Haig said this wasn't true in two regards. The cost of moving poles was only between $7,000 and $8,000 and the work was done to accommodate the turning lane that is going to be added at the Blairhampton Road intersection.

Holiday weekend relatively quiet on roads

For the first holiday weekend of the summer, Haliburton County EMS responded to 43 calls from 6 p.m. Friday until 8 a.m. Monday. Fifteen were emergencies and of them, six were motor vehicle collisions. None resulted in major injuries.

Even though the weather was unseasonably cool, there was a large number of visitors on the weekend that kept the roads and business areas quite busy. Of the six motor vehicle collisions,

"This is attributed to the enhanced police presence on our highways and stepped-up enforcement of traffic regulations", says EMS manager Bob English. "Also, the ever-increasing use of seat belts and air bags has proven to reduce injuries to accident victims."

No calls involved water mishaps.

Fixed rail trail not a smooth ride

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

One of the trouble spots on the rail trail corridor near Haliburton has been fixed and work on another is underway.

But the work is being done on a small budget so hikers and bikers shouldn't expect a smooth ride.

The county roads department used B grade gravel, which is coarser than other grades, to help fill in one of the wet spots.

"It will be a little rough," operations manager Doug Ray said at Wednesday's county council meeting.

Work on the second spot has been delayed to allow it to dry out a little more.

Ray warned about the dangers of a nearby beaver dam. He says it covers about 15 to 20 acres, storing a lot of water. Should it burst, "it's a potential disaster."

In this passion play, God plays lead role

SHERYL LOUCKS

Staff Reporter

Her voice, like that of her subject, is riveting.

Cynthia Donnelly shares in common with Catherine de Hueck Doherty two things, a passion for God and a gift for capturing the attention of an audience.

Donnelly visited St. Anthony of Padua Catholic Church in Haliburton recently to perform her one-woman play "A Woman In Love" about the life of Catherine de Hueck Doherty, who was passionately in love with God, and to give a conference on how to be disciples of love.

Doherty's story is about a Russian immigrant woman who survived unthinkable tragedies to found the Madonna House Apostolate, a community of lay people evangelizing through everyday life and serving the poor in Combermere, Ontario.

Doherty is now being considered for canonization and there are 20 apostolates or "field houses" based on her model spread through out the world.

Donnelly has given her life to God's service and has taken promises of poverty, chastity and obedience and lives at Madonna House. Her life and her service are similar to those of a nun's with the difference between them being largely technical in canon law.

She wrote the play, the original version with a cast, to commemorate the tenth anniversary of Doherty's death in 1985. Writing the play she drew upon personal experiences — she lived with Doherty for six years at Madonna House.

The play, Donnelly explains, is also two thirds Doherty's own words, taken from her journals, letters and papers.

Not only did she not originally expect to develop a one-woman play but she did not expect to take it on the road as she has for the last few years nor return to the theatre medium she left upon entering Madonna House.

Possessing a Bachelor of Arts from Aquinas College in Grand Rapids, Michigan, she worked with the New York Shakespeare Festival, Broadway productions and even on a Woody Allen film project — mainly behind the scenes in costuming.

"I love theatre, it was hard to give up. I'm quite grateful for this opportunity. The dynamics of the art form now is so different though. When I was in New York I wanted to be rich and famous; now my intent is to proclaim the gospel," she explains.

Raised as a good Catholic girl, as Doherty was, Donnelly says she first went to Madonna House at the age of 19 in 1967, did not return until 1979. She's been there since. It was not her intention to stay as it was not Doherty's intention to create a house where people took vows and gave their lives to the way of life she forged.

Cynthia Donnelly prepares herself to speak to the congregation of St. Anthony's in front of her favourite image in the Catholic church, the crucifix.

Both women discovered God had other plans for them.

Donnelly told the congregation during the conference that she once swore never to darken the door of another church and did everything in her power to "spit in God's eye."

"It's never good to threaten God. He's bigger and smarter," she joked.

The two women chose to devote their lives to God's work while they were in their 30s. Donnelly, knowing the depth of the horrors her mentor survived before achieving her transformation, does not make a comparison between them.

She says Doherty is an ideal candidate for sainthood because she represents the modern woman, a woman who was married twice, spent time as a working single mother, experienced wealth and abject poverty.

Doherty was born into a wealthy aristocratic family in Russia, had a golden childhood before marrying her first cousin Boris de Hueck, not an uncommon practice at the time. Russia and her husband were both shattered by the First World War.

Communists shot up their Petrograd apartment so they fled to their country estate where they were imprisoned and systematically starved to the point of their hair and teeth falling out. Rescued, they immigrated to Canada and had a son.

Doherty left them both in Toronto to find work in New York, an unsuccessful attempt. She returned to an unfaithful husband, whom years later she received an annulment from on the basis of their being first cousins.

Recruited for the lecture circuit, she spoke across North America and Europe before being called by God to give up all she had and work with the poor. She began Friendship House in Toronto, was forced out by rumours that she was a communist and began a new house in New York.

This venture too ended badly but there was a silver lining — she met her husband, journalist Eddie Doherty. They both abandoned their lives in New York to come to Canada to found Madonna House and eventually even chose a celibate life as the members of their community did.

Linda Salvatori, president of Haliburton's Catholic Women's League, says that while Donnelly tells this story she and other members of the audience say they forgot the woman speaking was not Doherty herself, the play and Donnelly's delivery is so engrossing.

"This play has a sacredness about it. It's the story of a woman's journey into her own heart and the heart of Christ," says Donnelly.

Father John Burchat says the conference was wonderful and enriching for his congregation.

Donnelly says that while some women feel left out in the Catholic church, she feels blessed to be able to give these conferences and performances.

"My community (Madonna House) was founded by a strong woman. She challenged bishops and revolutionized what it meant to be a Catholic. I can be a strong woman in the church and don't need to be ordained," says Donnelly.

Her own selfless goal is to enrich the lives of others by sharing her own, and Doherty's, inspiring stories of the strength of faith and the joy she insists can be found in a relationship with God.

Local historical archives need permanent preservation thank you very much.

We look forward to providing you with quality public service in the future and with your continued support we can rebuild Ontario's public service.

Minden/Haliburton public servants

ly made a trip to Haliburton in an effort to find documents and to take photographs. I would like to tell you how wonderful and generous the citizens of Haliburton County are. We stayed at Willow Beach Resort and thoroughly enjoyed the treatment and accommodations there. We received great service at The Haliburton County Echo, board of education, Minden library and from the Haliburton Genealogy Society.

My grandparents, Clare and Josephine (nee Maguire) Sawyer owned the old farmhouse on Airport Rd. in Maple lake across and up from Stanhope Airport (still standing) and my siblings and I have many memories of the ol' homestead. I also lived in Minden and in Haliburton Village from 1970 to 1972. Coming back still feels like coming home!

People were very generous in allowing me to take photos of what was my relative's home or lodge and that is now theirs. They were friendly, informative and generous providing information about my family members, directions and friendly chats. This project is getting bigger and bigger as I find so many Haliburton residents have places within my family tree, be it the Sawyer side or the Maguire side.

I would also like to thank Stephen Hill from the Haliburton Museum for all of his assistance as well.

A very serious concern I would like to share with your readers is the lack of security around the preservation of our heritage. The Echo has many photos that were provided by Haliburton residents that could be lost in an instant should there ever be another fire. I would like to see this information (all photos, newspapers etc) archived in a way that would protect them for future generations. This is the same for articles, photos and books in the care of the genealogy society and the museum. I understand that funding is an issue but there are grants and funding opportunities through Human Resource Development to access funding to hire staff to do this work. Heritage Canada may be a good source of funding. These are truly valuable resources that deserve protecting!

I understand from family members that my trip to Haliburton has many residents looking through photo albums and looking through documents for their only families.

I would like to say thank you for your help and for all of you interested in the preservation of your family legacy to get on board and do what you can to ensure that all the documentation available is copied and in a safe place for your grandchildren and great grandchildren. Whoever came up with the "Pics of the Past" addition to *The Echo*THANK YOU SO MUCH!!! I was able to find school pictures of my grandmother and her siblings! What a wonderful gift that made for my mother for Mother's Day!

For anyone with Sawyer/Maguire information or photos that you would like to share, please contact me at bonnyc2@hotmail.com

Famine project raises funds for third world youth

To the Editor:

On behalf of World Vision Canada, I want to thank the participants, organizers and volunteers for their valuable contribution to the 31st annual 30 Hour Famine.

The money from this year's 30 Hour Famine will support youth focused programs in Africa (Sierra, Leone, Kenya, Burundi, Tanzania, Ethiopia and Chad) India, Guatemala, Sri Lanka, and Canada. A portion of the funds raised will also aid children in Afghanistan.

For those of you who have already submitted your donations - thank you. For others who are still collecting money and planning Famine activities, we encourage you in your efforts.

"The greatest mistake you can make in life is to be continually fearing you will make one." ...Elbert Hubbard

By George!

Described as one of Canada's best teachers, sculptor George Pratt dazzles arts students in Haliburton

IT'S A TIME TO STROKE THE SOUL, sort of like giving yourself a soul massage. Or at least that's how renowned stone sculptor George Pratt describes his four-week stone carving course at the Haliburton School of The Arts.

People from across Ontario have come to learn the basics of turning a piece of limestone into a bird or polar bear from Pratt.

Story
by Kenneth
Jackson

One student travelled from Toronto and had nothing but praise for his teacher.

"George is a fantastic teacher. He has so much experience," said Tom Berner. "He is one of our country's best."

Pratt, who was born in the Minden area, started teaching the course in 1987. "The Haliburton School of Fine Arts wanted to have a stone carving course so they somehow sought me out. I was then a busy practising sculptor.

"I was living in the west coast, but I guess I had a bit of reputation, because I did a couple of notable sculptures. In particular the Terry Fox sculpture which I did right after Terry died, and it's now placed in front of the Terry Fox Library in Port Coquitlam where he lived."

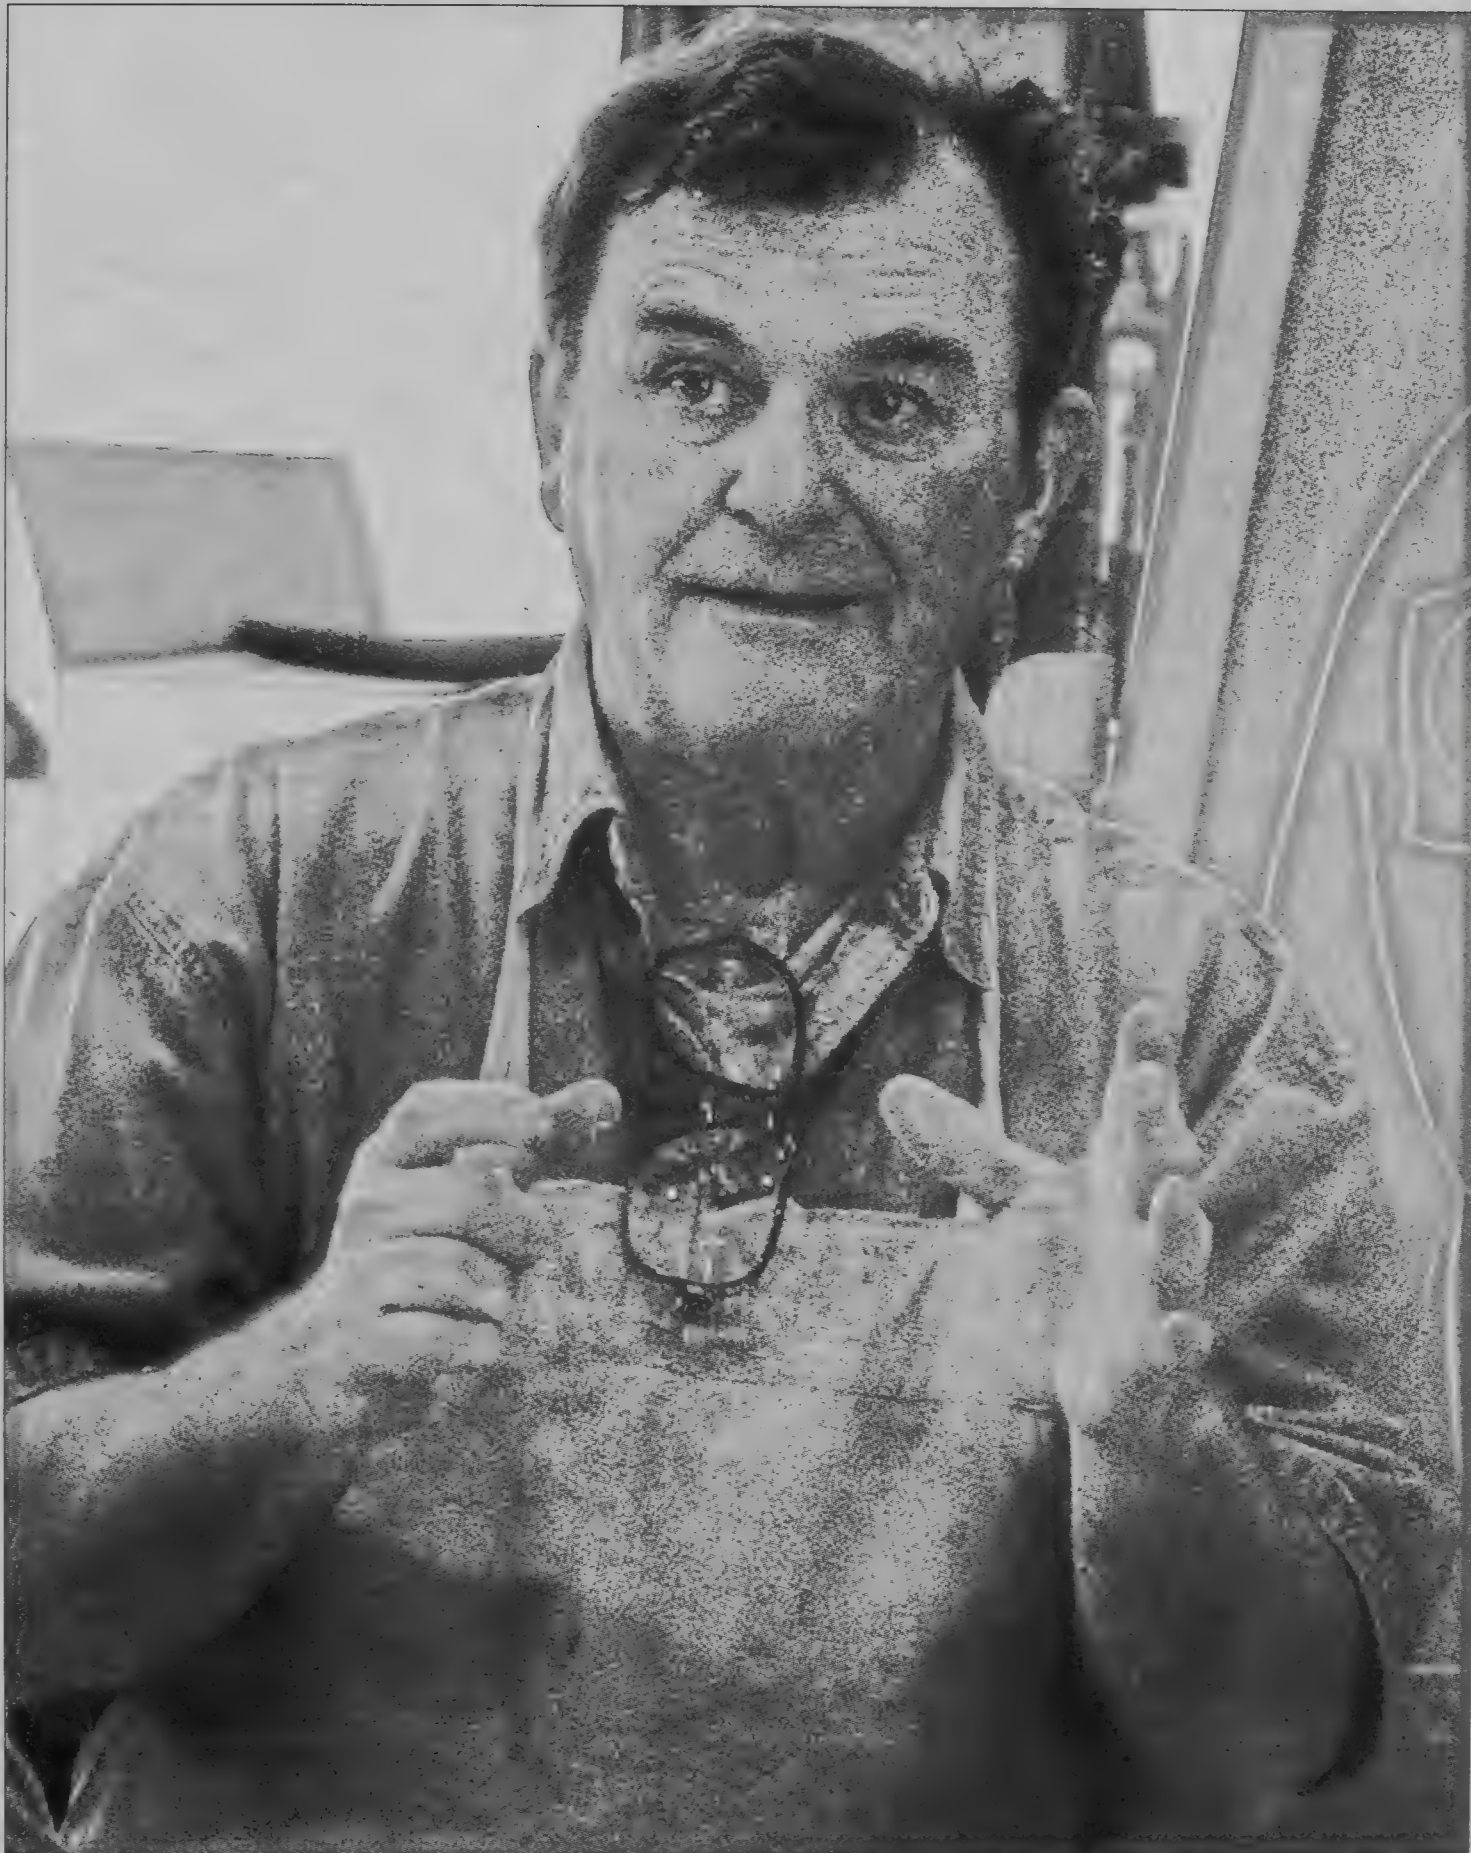

Looking back on the journey his own life has taken him on, Pratt says, "The step from being a boy in Minden to being an artist wasn't a direct one.

"I think it could be direct for people now because there is so much artistic influence in Haliburton County, but there wasn't then."

He says most young men left to join the army.

"Most of us left Minden to find some sort of fortune. I ended up doing a lot of things before I ever became a sculptor. I joined the navy for five years. I got out and saw the country. My life career before I became a sculptor was a salesman. And I turned out to be a pretty good one. I always made good money at it and I always sold a lot of what my boss wanted me to sell."

It wasn't until 1970 when he met the famous stone carver E.B. Cox (who is still actively stone carving at the age of 87) that his life took a change in direction.

"When I met Mr. E.B. Cox he was doing a form of art that I had no doubt I could do. I just needed somebody to show me the basics of how to get started. He helped me after a lot of pestering, and I kind of proceeded from there.

"With a little bit of guidance from E.B. Cox, who became a fast friend over the years, I was able to get going."

After going out and making his way in the world, he says he came back here and kept a cottage at Eagle Lake.

"I was pretty much just like any other tourist for a while, but my roots are here."

He says all the work he has done over the years allows him to teach people the necessary tricks to his long-time passion.

"I've done a lot of work over the time and I am very well qualified to teach other people how to do it. There is hardly anything I haven't done in stone carving."

"So when I come here I sort of come with the philosophy I don't purport to be able to teach people very much about art. I don't know if you can teach anybody much about art. You can show them some tricks. But if they are doing it to become a stone mason that is fine too," he says with a chuckle.

"Most of these people have some art in their heart before they ever meet me. They just exploit it through the medium that I am able to teach them."

'Everyone that comes to the course seems to be anxious to get here before the doors open and they are crying because we close them at night to let the janitor clean up'

This is the program's first four-week course, and Pratt says it's for people who want to take an applied course in stone arts. "If you come here and stick with it for the full four weeks, by the end you'll become a pretty knowledgeable person in stone carving, but how accomplished you'll be is going to have a lot to do with your own personal ability."

"On just the third day you can see some finished projects. So we are doers here. Everyone that comes to the course seems to be anxious to get here before the doors open and they are crying because we close them at night to let the janitor clean up. So we have some keeners," he says.

Pratt says of teaching his students how to carve stone is like having the power to open flowers. Before he reaches the end of his life, he says he wants to give back to his home town.

"Haliburton is my home town. Not just Minden but Haliburton County. They have a new sculpture garden going in. I should be doing something for that. Just so I can leave my mark in the place where my roots are before I finally meet the great maker."

Beaver away

Rose Pearson's Grade 12 art students have been busily preparing their contribution to the Haliburton Sculpture Forest in Glebe Park. Here, Alex Ambridge (above) and Catherine Walton (left) apply a layer of clay to a styrofoam base shaped into a beaver. The next tasks are to do detail work in the clay, make a mold, cast it and finish it off with a surface treatment. The beaver will be about to gnaw away at an old lamp post, donated by Minden Hills. Overseeing the project are Gelert artists Mary-Anne Barkhouse and Michael Belmore.

Real life 'Home Alone'

Six-year-old left behind at Harcourt restaurant

Victoria Day weekend saw relatives, friends and cottagers visiting Harcourt and surrounding area. We were among the fortunate ones who had family come to visit. My daughter Dawn and her husband Jason came for the weekend bringing granddaughter Rachel. On the Sunday, while enjoying lunch at the Algonquin Cookhouse, four sets of protective eyes gazed upon Rachel as she slept peacefully in her stroller. She was one of the lucky children who had parents and grandparents who were always trying to be one step ahead of her as she experimented with life. The little girl seated at the bar in the restaurant was not so lucky.

We were uncomfortable as we listened to the questions being put to her: "What is your name, where do you live and how old community news

harcourt

Valerie Smith

are you?" She shyly answered in a frightened voice, giving her name, saying that she lived in Canada and that she was six years old. Our hearts went out to her as we tried to imagine the sense of aloneness which filled this child as the big, tall police officer tried to find out more information. Can anyone understand the terror of utter emptiness she was feeling as she tried to explain she knew her family was only a few minutes drive from Harcourt? The police officer tried to measure out what a few minutes drive from Harcourt would mean to a six-year old.

The three carloads of her family had been in the restaurant over two hours before and they still had not come back to look for this abandoned child. Where could they possibly be? The police officer, working on a "hunch," decided to take her for a drive to see if she remembered some familiar land sites. Terror crossed the child's face as she looked way up at him and back at the police car.

She hesitantly got into the police car and they drove away. This story has a happy ending. The police officer's hunch paid off and he found her family only 13 kilometers away, busy working on clearing land for their new trailer site. They were too busy to miss their six-year-old daughter.

This child suffered chaos and confusion but her sufferings could have been far greater if she had not been administered to by such gentle people as Amy Swain and the kind staff of Algonquin Cookhouse and the police officer. Let us all hope this family in the future will give this little traumatized girl lots of love and emotional support.

Lots of other things are happening in Harcourt besides seeking out lost parents of six-year-olds.

June 9: Next meeting of the Harcourt Community Centre Hall Board. Please note there will be no meeting in the month of May.

June 28: End of School Pre-teen Dance. 8 p.m. - 11 p.m. Ages 7 - 16 welcome.

Agreement reached between Parks Canada and union

Parks Canada is pleased to announce that a tentative agreement has been reached between Parks Canada Agency and the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC), which now represents all unionized Parks Canada employees, including those who work for Trent Severn Waterways.

"This is an agreement that compares well to other recent public service settlements and fulfills a commitment we made to our staff" said Tom Lee, Chief Executive Officer of Parks Canada.

The PSAC will be submitting the settlement to Parks Canada's represented employees for ratification during the coming weeks.

Students shine in Legion's Remembrance Day contests

DENNIS BAKER

Special to The Echo

As the Youth Education Chairperson of Branch 129, Haliburton, of the Royal Canadian Legion, I would like to thank all the students who participated in this year's Remembrance Day Literary and Poster contests. Altogether we had 212 entries. They should be proud of their efforts.

I would like to thank all the teachers, the school administration, and the parent who encouraged these students to make the effort. Your interest and support was much appreciated! Also, I wish to recognize and commend this year's judges who were Bonnie Walling, Brian Hambly, Maraylene Welch, Jim Stewart and Eric Thompson. They had a difficult task especially when judging the poems and posters. Many could have been selected to go on to the next level.

Listed below are the winners of each contest in order of rank. All first place winners moved on to compete with other entries within our Zone.

Poetry Contest: Grades 10 - O.A.C.: Jennifer Carpenter, Vanessa Smith, and Amber Wright. Grades 7, 8 and 9: Kim Gale, Josh Pasley and Stephanie Lewis. Grades 4, 5 and 6: Lindsey Snelgrove, Bethany Snelgrove, and Emily Gilbert. Honourable mention goes to Kristene Barry, Erin Stephen and Nigel St. Pierre.

Essay Contest: Grades 10 - O.A.C.: Jennifer Moynes and Amber Wright. Grades 7, 8 and 9: Max Creelman, Lisa Wright and David Wright. Honourable mention goes to Jessica Foulds. Grades 4, 5 and 6: Meghan Bottum, Chloe Kitcheman and Katlyn Hollands. Poster Contest - Black and White: Grades 10 - O.A.C.: There were no entries in this category this year. Grades 7, 8 and 9: Laura Stouffer, Amanda Crego and Benton Brown Honourable mention goes to Taylor Barton, Connor MacMillan, and Jennifer Porter. Grades 4, 5 and 6: Bethany Snelgrove, Siobhan Creelman and Scott Griffith. Honourable mention goes to Harley Foulds, Amber Loney, and Alex Trueman. Grades 1, 2 and 3: Nicole Jennings and Ian Bottum

Poster Contest - Colour: Grades 7, 8 and 9: Anna Schleifenbaum, Ashlie Barry and Laura Riley. Honourable mention goes to Tobie Espie. Grades 4, 5 and 6: Lindsey Snelgrove, Ainsley Monroe and Kyla Suchovs Honourable mention goes to Sammy Blanchard, Dylan Dahlke and Tamara Poropat. Grades 1, 2 and 3: Christina Lauricella, Meghan Varty and Emily Monroe. Honourable mention goes to Sherri-Lynn Barry and Cole Miscio.

Public Speaking: Grades 4-6: Matthew Duchene, Siobhan Creelman, Cyril Darke, Nadia Shivji. Grades 7 and 8: Kyle Evans, Laura Stouffer and Jessica Foulds. Grades 9 and 10: Amber Wright, Lisa Wright and Shannon Carr.

This year we had seven winners at Zone Level. We had six students place first and one student place third. The work of all first place winners moved on to compete at District Level.

Essay: Category I - Senior: 1st - Jennifer Moynes; Category II - Intermediate: 1st - Max Creelman. Jennifer came second at district.

Poetry: Category I - Senior: 1st - Jennifer Carpenter; Category III - Junior: 3rd - Lindsey Snelgrove.

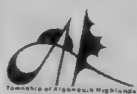

Coloured Posters: Category II - Intermediate: 1st - Anna Schleifenbaum; Category III - Junior: 1st - Lindsey Snelgrove

Black and White Posters: Category III - Junior: 1st - Bethany Snelgrove. She came second at District.

Public Speaking: Category I - Senior: 1st - Amber Wright. She advanced to the area competition, which is just one level short of the provincials.

Popular Home & Vacation show returns this week for 24th year

The Dysart arena and curling club provide plenty of space for exhibitors and home show visitors

Annual event includes a wide range of exhibitors offering goods and services for home or cottage

The 24th Annual Haliburton Home and Vacation Show returns this weekend with plenty to see and do.

This very popular show is held in the Dysart Arena and Curling Club in Haliburton. It opens Friday at 4 p.m. and continues throughout the weekend.

The show features over 120 exhibit spaces, and offers a wide range of merchandise and services from local businesses and regional suppliers. Admission is $2. for adults, children are free and there is lots of free parking.

For those wanting to take a break from browsing the show booths, the Curling Club sponsors a large tented area where visitors will find food and entertainment. Be sure to take in the many outside exhibits including a chainsaw carver and a portable sawmill in operation.

The first building you enter is the Curling Club which has 40 exhibits. One that is sure to appeal to every visitor is a nature garden featuring live birds and animals, installed by local artist David Alexander Risk. There will be many other new new exhibits in the Curling Club this year, Haliburton Home & Vacation Show!

May 31, June 1 & 2, 2002

In the Haliburton Curling Club

New hours more convenient for visitors

including outdoor lawn ornaments, crafts and games.

The arena is full, with over 80 exhibitors displaying their products and services. If you're looking for help or a specific product, you're very likely to find it at the home show.

Show hours have been slightly changed this year. The arena and curling club will close earlier on Saturday and open earlier Sunday.

The NEW hours are as follows:

- Friday, May 31, 4 p.m. - 9 p.m.
- Saturday, June 1, 10 a.m. - 7 p.m.
- Sunday, June 2, 10 a.m. - 4 p.m.

Last year's show was the most successful ever, attended by more than 3,000 people. This year's show should be even better. It's an excellent place to meet the experts, find new products, get information to help you make an informed choice about major purchases, and meet your neighbours in a friendly atmosphere.

For show information call Wayne Hussey, (705) 457-2892.

Visitors to last year's show talk to Wayne deJong, left, of Newbatts Appliances in Haliburton

Proud of the ongoing partnership with the Haliburton High School construction class. Last year the students created a Garden Shed which we raffled off at the show. This year's projects include a fish hut in the first semester and a dog house this semester. The hut was raffled off in January and was won by Dennis McKee of Haliburton. The dog house will be raffled off at this year's show. The dog house will be displayed in booth 38. Tickets will be available for purchase from any member and at the booth.

A thing of beauty

Hard work transforms nurse sculpture

The nurse sculpture in the village park seems to stand more proudly this spring. The plants among the rocks at its base, having wintered well, are flourishing. And after last Wednesday afternoon's work bee of willing gardeners the sculpture mound and the whole area is a very inviting place.

They came with plants and tools. They dug, they weeded, they planted, they watered. The Sculpture Landscaping Committee thanks all who donated perennials for the Logo bed, shrubs for around the mound, manure to fertilize, and who gave of their time to get the actual gardening done. Those who have supported this ongoing project financially are much appreciated also.

When the danger of frost is past some annuals will be added to fill in areas which eventually will be taken over by the perennials and the hedge. Volunteers will kindly water the plantings throughout the summer. Do visit the area and enjoy.

You are invited to a service of Music and Worship at the Wilberforce United Church on Sunday, June 2. Taking part in this 11:30 a.m. service will be The Gentlemen of Song and vocalist Caroline Dahlke.

Members of the Loop Troupe's cast and crew of the recent presentations of one act plays enjoyed a pleasant supper together on Thursday, May 23. It was fun chatting over the ups and downs of working together to "put on" plays. Flo Elliott had everyone laughing over a reading/acting game she had devised to relive some of the special moments in the plays. Flo presented the Loopy Award to Hilda Clark for her efforts in this year's productions. Thanks to Shirley Riley, a resident of Maple View apartments for arranging the get-together in the Recreation Room there.

Several Wilberforce residents greatly enjoyed the Quartetto Gelato on Friday, May 24, at the Northern Lights Pavilion in Haliburton. As the program states, "their breathtaking virtuosity, irrepressible energy and charming wit, Toronto-based Quartetto Gelato has won the hearts of audiences across their native Canada and the U.S. since their remarkable 1994 debut season."

The program featured an exciting mix of classical favourites, traditional melodies, tangos and gypsy fiddling with Cynthia Steljes on oboe, Peter De Sotto, violin and voice, Joseph Macerollo, accordion, and George Meanwell on cello and guitar. This talented group won more hearts here in the Highlands last Friday night.

Over the past two weekends many from this area have enjoyed the Bancroft High School's presentation of "Into the Woods". From all reports it was a smashing success.

Lynn Watson who has been the minister at the United Churches in Wilberforce and Gooderham for the past year was ordained on Sunday, May 26, at the Calvin United Church in Pembroke. So she is now the Reverend Lynn Watson. Best wishes to Lynn as she continues on in her chosen work.

After years of study at Queen's University, Kingston, she is to be congratulated on her successful completion of that work. The Rev. Lynn was one of several ordained with family and friends from Bancroft, Wilberforce and Gooderham among the eight hundred in attendance at this service of Holy Communion and Ordination. Marion Pardy, Moderator of the United Church of Canada, Clergy and elders from the Bay of Quinte and area Conference were part of this service.

The Rev. Lynn Watson will be working in a pastoral charge in Renfrew Township. We wish her well. She will be missed in this area.

Icing on the cake

The opening of the new Alzheimer Society office on York Street is the icing on the cake for staff and board members who were thrilled to welcome the community to their new space in an official opening on Wednesday. Left to right is Lachlan MacQuarrie, president of the society and Janet Bottum, support services coordinator.
